

Learn About HireVue: The USPTO's Virtual Interview Platform

About HireVue

The United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) uses the HireVue platform for virtual video interviews. HireVue does not limit candidates to business hours — interviews can often be completed at times chosen by the applicants! If selected for an interview, you will receive an email from interviews@uspto.hirevue.com inviting you to a digital interview with a window of time to complete it.

FAQs

I received an invitation to digitally interview for an examiner position at the USPTO and was unable to complete the interview during the designated window. May I reschedule?

With the HireVue interview format, the specific time window to interview for a patent examiner position is not extended. If you applied and are unable to complete the interview before the time window closes, you will be invited to the next open interview window, if more interviews are being scheduled.

I received notice from HireVue that I was referred for a position, but have not heard back from a representative. May I have the status of my application?

You will not receive status updates from HireVue regarding your application. Status notifications will be posted on USAJobs. Specific questions about your application should go to the agency contact provided on the vacancy announcement.

I received an email about scheduling an interview through HireVue. However, it was marked as spam, and I am just now seeing it. Is it too late to reschedule?

If you are unable to complete the interview before the window closes, you will be invited to the next open interview window, if more interviews are being scheduled.

There is an issue with my interview link on HireVue. Can I be sent another link?

If you have technical difficulties with the HireVue software, please go to the HireVue Help Center page.

I recently completed my HireVue interview. What are the next steps?

More information regarding your next steps can be found on the Patent Examine Hiring Timeline page. Your USAJobs status will be updated to “Selected” or “Not Selected.” If you are selected for the position, the USPTO Office of Human Resources will contact you to extend a job offer.

I received an email from HireVue with a link to schedule an interview for a patent examiner position, but I have already completed my interview. Where am I at in the hiring process?

Status notifications will be communicated within USAJobs. For specific questions about your application, please refer to the agency contact information provided on the vacancy announcement.
